- (h) All authors understand that material submitted to The Journal of Nutrition is embargoed until 12:01a.m. on the issue mailing date. Embargoed information is not to be made public in any format, including print, television, radio, or via the Internet, before the embargo date. ASN reserves the right to halt the consideration or publication of a paper if this condition is broken.

Rights of Authors and The Journal of Nutrition Embargo Policy: please see pages 3 & 4.

Open Access publication option: Authors of accepted manuscripts can choose to pay an open access fee to allow their articles to become freely accessible on the journal website immediately upon publication. The open access fee is $3,000 per article and is charged in addition to other author charges (page charges, color reproduction charges, author alteration charges and charges for reprint orders). For authors who elect not to pay the open access fee, articles will remain under access control for the first 12 months after publication. Upon acceptance of an article, authors interested in the open access publication option will be instructed to download the Open Access Choice Form (see JN Instructions for Authors, <http://jn.nutrition.org/>) to provide article and billing information. Pending receipt of payment, the article will be made freely accessible immediately upon publication. The remainder of the author fees (page charges, color charges, cost of reprints) will be billed after publication.

Authors who receive Wellcome Trust funding can comply with the Wellcome Trust open access publishing requirements by selecting the JN open access publishing option. The open access form includes a section where Wellcome Trust can provide information on their Wellcome Trust grant. The American Society for Nutrition (ASN) will deposit high resolution files and the final version of the article in PubMedCentral on behalf of Wellcome Trust authors who pay the open access fee and will authorize public posting on PubMedCentral and PubMedCentral mirror sites immediately.

Author fees: Authors will be charged a $75 manuscript submission fee. The manuscript submission fee is waived when the corresponding author is a member of the American Society for Nutrition, when a manuscript will be included in the proceedings of an approved ASN EB annual meeting symposium, or when a manuscript will be included in a supplement publication. Authors will be billed for the following items: color reproduction costs ($400/figure for regular and ASN EB symposium manuscripts; $800 per published page of color for supplement manuscripts), author alterations to manuscript proofs, reprints, and page charges of $75/page for the first seven pages, $120 per page for pages eight and above. Page charges will be waived when a manuscript is included in the proceedings of an approved ASN EB annual meeting symposium, unless the manuscript exceeds the length allowed. Supplement manuscript page charges, which are billed at a different rate, will be charged to the supplement sponsor. For information on waivers of page charges and manuscript submission fees, please consult The Journal of Nutrition Instructions for Authors, www.jn.nutrition.org.

Rights of Authors: effective upon acceptance for publication, the American Society for Nutrition hereby licenses the following nonexclusive rights back to authors:

- a. Patent and trademark rights to any process or procedure described in the article
- b. The right to photocopy or make single electronic copies of the article for their own personal use, including for their own classroom use, or for the personal use of colleagues, provided the copies are not offered for sale and are not distributed in a systematic way outside of their employing institution (e.g. via an email list or public file server). Posting of the article on a secure network (not accessible to the public) within the author's institution is permitted.
- c. The right, subsequent to publication, to use the article or any part thereof free of charge in a printed compilation of works of their own, such as collected writings, theses or lecture notes; to reuse original figures and tables in future works; to present data from your paper at a meeting or conference; to include your article in your thesis or dissertation.
- d. The right to reproduce reasonable print quantities for personal use for purposes other than those outlined in (b) if 100 reprints are purchased
- e. Authors may post a link on a personal website that directs readers to the article on The Journal of Nutrition website (www.jn.nutrition.org); full text of the final, published article can not be posted on personal or institutional websites or repositories that are accessible to the public.
- f. For Works created under a grant from the NIH and accepted for publication after May 2, 2005: The principal investigators (PIs) of NIH-funded research grants that support work published in peer-reviewed journals have been asked to comply with a new NIH policy to deposit any accepted manuscripts on the PubMed Central website. Since the JN owns copyright to all manuscripts published in the JN per the agreement signed on submission of the manuscript, we grant the PI permission to deposit this accepted manuscript in PubMed Central according to the NIH request, with the stipulation that the PI accepts any liability that may arise through release of the manuscript in its present form. To avoid this potential liability, the JN suggests that the PI delay submission of this manuscript to PubMed Central until our publication office has completed all required copyediting within the next several months. At that point, the corresponding author will be provided with a finished PDF version that will represent the material to be published in the JN. Provision of the final PDF version to PubMed Central will avoid all ambiguity that could otherwise result from the presence of one incomplete and the other complete copy of the manuscript.

If the PI decides to submit the unedited version of the manuscript, a further stipulation to the release of the manuscript to the NIH is that it must contain the following statement at the top of the title page: "This is an un-copied author manuscript that has been accepted for publication in The Journal of Nutrition, copyright American Society for Nutrition (ASN). This manuscript may not be duplicated or reproduced, other than for personal use or within the rule of 'Fair Use of Copyrighted Materials' (section 107, Title 17, US Code) without permission of the copyright owner, the ASN. The final copyedited article, which is the version of record, can be found at <http://jn.nutrition.org/>. The ASN disclaims any responsibility or liability for errors or omissions in this version of the manuscript or in any version derived from it by the National Institutes of Health or other parties."

Regardless of whether the un-copied version or the copyedited, final version of the manuscript is submitted to the NIH, the PI must abide by the JN policy of making articles free online on our website as well as in the NIH repository 12 months after publication. This will satisfy both the JN and NIH policies.
